Ghazi University to establish Confucius Institute

By Tariq Saeed Birmani

DERA GHAZI KHAN: The Ghazi University will establish a Confucius Institute to foster educational and cultural collaboration between Pakistan and China.

The initiative, announced by Vice Chancellor Prof Dr Ashfaq, will focus on Chinese language education and cultural exchange programmes, further strengthening ties with China.

In an interview, Dr Ashfaq shared his vision to transform Ghazi University into a centre of academic excellence for south Punjab.

Key initiatives include improving teaching standards by adopting modern pedagogical methods and aligning them with international benchmarks. He added that he had plans to attract international research funding and create a cutting-edge research center.

Mentioning climate change, the vice chancellor stated that the university would promote interdisciplinary and climate-related research, supporting sustainable solutions for the region.

Dr Ashfaq also revealed plans to rehabilitate the university's airport campus, with his office being relocated there upon its completion.

The university will also introduce new academic programmes, including short courses and degree programmes tailored to address the specific needs of Dera Ghazi Khan, Rajanpur and Muzaffargarh.

In the agricultural sector, Dr Ashfaq announced the development of a date value chain to support farmers and the scientific promotion of local livestock breeds like Dajal and Nuqra. Efforts will also be made to improve pasture development and enhance livestock farming practices. Additionally, the university plans to study and optimise the usage of hill torrent water systems for the benefit of local communities.

Dr Ashfaq underlined the university's commitment to promoting regional languages, including Seraiki and Balochi, alongside Chinese.

He further emphasized the importance of building a sustainable agricultural economy through community education and skill development programs, aiming to uplift the socio-economic conditions of south Punjab.

Ghazi University's Spark Expo features entrepreneurship

By Our Correspondent

DERA GHAZI KHAN: A two-day 'Ghazi Spark Expo' was organised at Ghazi University to provide students with awareness about manufacturing products under new ideas.

The inaugural ceremony of the 'Ghazi Spark Expo' of Regional Plan 9 took place on the university lawn.

Deputy Commissioner Muhammad Usman Khalid and Vice Chancellor Professor Dr Ashfaq Ahmed inaugurated the expo.

Along with other guests, they inspected the stalls and products set up by students, whose efforts in creating products free from harmful health principles were highly appreciated. Mr

Khalid said that the expo's main objective is to attract youth to the business world, emphasizing that providing a business environment is crucial.

He said that new ideas enable youth to advertise products through social media and secure cooperation from renowned institutions.

Prof Ashfaq said that students should turn ideas into reality, create job opportunities, and contribute to the country's economy. The university administration will provide resources to promote students' products.

Students briefed guests about items prepared from their unique ideas, and the expo also covered business strategies and modern requirements.

Ghazi varsity marks National Working Women's Day

By Our Correspondent

DERA GHAZI KHAN: Ghazi University commemorated the National Working Women's Day with an awareness seminar titled 'The Significant Role of Women Leadership in Advancing Society'.

Organised by the Women's Development Centre, the event celebrated the contributions, challenges, and rights of working women.

Key speakers included lawyer Naureen Iqbal Tarin, entrepreneur Mah Noor, women's chamber representative Farah Rashid, Darul Aman in charge Zarnia Iqbal, dental surgeon Salbia Batool Bhatti and Working Women Hostel in charge Anisa Fatima.

The seminar, hosted by sociology lecturer Samira Bano, explored topics such as entrepreneurship, legal rights, and government initiatives for women's welfare. Speakers shared inspiring narratives emphasizing resilience, equality, and empowerment. Entrepreneur Mah Noor recounted her journey of launching a business without initial capital, while Naureen Iqbal offered free legal assistance to women in need.

Registrar Dr. Abid Mahmood Alvi highlighted the university's ongoing initiatives, including the Women's Development Centre, Business Incubation Centre, and e-Rozgar Makerspace, all aimed at fostering skills and independence among women.

He also stressed the importance of the anti-harassment cell and the university's strict zero-tolerance policy against harassment. Vice-Chancellor Prof. Dr. Ashfaq Ahmad presided over the event.

RESCUE 1122 District Emergency Officer Engineer Ahmed Kamal announced the launch of a comprehensive internship programme.

The initiative, launched at Chowk Chorhatta, is designed to train university students in first aid and emergency response.

Participants will gain hands-on experience with advanced medical equipment and learn life-saving techniques, including artificial respiration for cardiac arrest, bleeding control, and personal safety measures. Upon completing the program, trainees will assist at Rescue 1122 centers across the city.

Mr. Kamal said that the programme aims to empower youth, equipping them with essential skills to enhance community safety and effectively manage emergencies.

The initiative, part of the Pakistan Life-Saving Program, is supervised by Operations in charge Mian Abdul Rauf and Community Safety in charge Kanwar Faheem.

Seminar highlights strategies for cotton production

By Our Correspondent

DERA GHAZI KHAN: Ghazi University hosted a seminar on "Cotton Restoration: Strategies for Sustainable Production and Market Demand," addressing the critical challenges facing Pakistan's cotton sector.

Organised by the Department of Plant Breeding and Genetics under the chairmanship of Vice-Chancellor Prof. Dr. Ashfaq Ahmed, the event drew experts, including Prof. Dr. Abdul Qayyum of Bahauddin Zakariya University Multan, farmer Jamilur Rehman Khan Buzdar, and Dr. Pir Muhammad Idrees, as keynote speakers.

The seminar was attended by officers from the Department of Agriculture DG Khan, faculty members from the Faculty of Agriculture, and a large number of students. Dr. Masood Qadir, Lecturer in the Department of Plant Breeding and Genetics, moderated the event.

The guest speakers emphasised the importance of cotton to Pakistan's economy, noting its role as a primary raw material for the textile industry and a major source of employment.

They addressed the decline in cotton production and quality in recent years and proposed solutions such as adopting modern agricultural techniques, balanced fertilizer usage, better seed selection, farmer training, and policy reforms.

Vice-Chancellor Prof. Dr. Ashfaq Ahmed highlighted the impact of climate change on cotton production, stressing the need to develop climate-resilient seeds and prioritize organic and sustainable cotton production to meet global market demand. He also called for the establishment of new research centers and initiatives to boost cotton exports.
